Mullins settles into new role at Estill Springs

By LISA BICKNELL
CV&T News Editor

In early December, 33-year old Jessica Dennis Mullins stepped into a new role as principal of Estill Springs Elementary, making her one of the youngest, if not the youngest, person to step into such a role in the Estill County School system.

Mullins said December was an exciting time to come into the position, although it was something of an “abnormal month.”

She says all the holiday activities--the Christmas play, the Christmas dinner and Family Fun Night--were great opportunities to meet the parents and grandparents.

One of Mullin's goals is to get to know all her students by name.

Although she has been playing “catch-up” by coming in to the job at mid-year,

Mullins says interim principal Chesteen Robbins helped her tremendously with the transition.

Robbins stayed during Mullins' first week as principal at Estill Springs Elementary.

Mullins began her career in education as special education teacher at Waco Elementary, and she taught at Estill Springs for a while. She then taught pre-school at a private school for a few years, before coming back to Estill Springs.

For the past three years, Mullins has been district curriculum coach, which she says was great training for her new job.

“I have shadowed every principal,” said Mullins, “from South Irvine to High School to Central Office.”

She says observing those leadership models helped

Estill Springs principal Jessica Mullins said the “Elf on the Shelf” was such a success in December that the school has decided to begin hiding “Frosty the Snowman” during the month of January. She said the hunt for items such as the elf and the snowman are great attendance incentives and behavior monitors.

Cold spell results in problems for customers, water office

By LISA BICKNELL
CV&T News Editor

A boil water advisory was issued Saturday evening for all Estill County customers receiving water from the Winston water tank. Twelve to thirteen hundred customers were affected, as they experienced low water pressure or no water at all.

Customers in the Knob Lick area were without water for the majority of the week, according to Audrea Miller, an administrator with the Estill County Water Office. The Knob Lick tank, located at a higher elevation, ran out of water first when the Winston tank ran low.

Miller said the problems began with the cold spell at the beginning of last week. She said many customers left their water running overnight to keep pipes from freezing which depleted the tanks more quickly than usual.

When the thaw began, many lines broke or developed leaks, further depleting tanks.

On Tuesday, the boil water advisory was still in place, but the water tanks were full again.

Miller said water employees worked around the clock for two or three nights in a row to address the problems.

She said customers called to complain that they did not receive a call about the boil water advisory. Miller said if they did not, they should call Estill Emergency Management, the 9-1-1 center, to update their information.

Miller says the EMS “is nice enough” to send out the call as a customer courtesy, but they cannot call residents whose information is not in the system.

She said local television and radio stations, as well as Facebook, made the announcement about the boil water advisory, as the state requires them to do.

“All protocols were met,” said Miller. The Judge-Executive contacted the governors' office in case a state of emergency needed to be declared, and the local fire departments helped refill the tanks.

With cold weather returning to the area again mid-week, Miller urged customers to try to use sufficient heat to keep the pipes from freezing. She also recommended cus-

Call EMA to sign up for advisories

To receive notifications and alerts about local outages and storms, residents of the county can either call or visit the EMA website to receive notifications and alerts, according to Melissa Jessie, with the Estill County Emergency Management Agency.

For those with access to the internet, go to estillcountytyma.com and look for “alert and notification” at the top of the webpage. There is a link, Estill County Alert and Notification Portal, on that page where residents can create an account to receive notifications about weather or other local emergencies.

For those residents without access to a computer, Jesse said they can call 723-6533 or stop by the EMA/CSEPP office at 182 Broadway to be entered into the database to receive calls or texts in the event of a boiled water advisory issuance or other emergency notification.

tomers be as conserving as possible. If pipes freeze and burst, she said, is it important that those pipes be repaired promptly because “thirty customers with leaks adds up to a main break.”

Miller says employees of the water office didn't take the crisis lightly, and they hope the situation doesn't ever happen again.

Concert raises money for animal shelter

By LISA BICKNELL
CV&T News Editor

The Bluegrass concert hosted by the Estill County Animal Shelter Friday night at the fair barn brought in about $1,400, according to Tommy Mullen, the animal control officer at the shelter.

The Moron Brothers and The Velvet Blue entertained the crowd with music and laughs, and the Southern Pride Cloggers performed to some toe-tapping tunes.

There was a raffle, a silent auction and a 50/50 pot, and many concert-goers walked away with prizes.

Mullen said he plans to purchase a couple of dog traps and cat traps, as well as some smaller items with funds raised.

He hopes to do another benefit concert for the summer and says he would like to set a long-term goal to repaint and reseal the entire shelter.

“I want to do it right so it doesn't have to be repainted every year,” he said.

Local woman arrested after fall through ceiling

By LISA BICKNELL
CV&T News Editor

The Irvine Police Department, with the assistance of District 1 Constable Danny Conrad, arrested Cynthia K. Puckett, 29, on warrants from two counties on Dec. 28, 2013.

Puckett, of 135 Hardy Road, had been on the run from law enforcement since August of 2013.

She was arrested at 113 Oak Street after being served three Madison County warrants and one Estill County warrant.

The Estill County warrant states that on Nov. 14, 2013, Cynthia K. Puckett unlawfully told Constable Conrad that she was Cynthia Henry and that she did not use other last names.

Conrad stated that he attempted to serve a warrant on Puckett, whom he suspected was the defendant. She went inside to get her Social Security card but shut the door and locked it after Conrad ordered her to stop.

Conrad searched the home and discovered that she had fled on foot.

According to Irvine Police Captain Adrian McKinney, Puckett was finally caught up with at her father's home. He said she was hiding in the ten-foot ceiling and was crawling around trying to get away when she fell through to the floor.

The warrants from Madison County were for various counts of shoplifting, contempt of court libel/slander resistance to order, failure to wear seat belts and operating on suspended or revoked license.

Puckett was lodged in the Estill County jail.

prepare her to be principal at Estill Springs Elementary. Besides overseeing the day-to-day operations of the school, Mullins' duties include professional development of teachers, planning and lots of assessment.

While there is no state assessment requirement for first and second grade, there are assessment tools to see "where we are at on a state level."

Whether it is a curriculum issue or an instructional issue, Mullins says she feels accountable.

She hopes to see her students "develop positive character traits within the school setting and within the community," and her goal is that "each student will meet or exceed daily learning objectives and reach his or her academic potential."

Another of Mullin's top priorities is to foster positive communication and relationships with families.

Calling the first and second grade center "a unique thing," she said other schools are also looking at that model. She said they don't have the bullying issues that schools with a wider age range have.

Another factor that made the position attractive: Students are ESE are not yet heavily into intramurals, which means Mullins has fewer work related after-school obligations.

She and her husband Ronald have three young children of their own, and it was important to her to maintain time for them. Their children are Lauren Kennedy, 11, William Andrew, 6, and Isaac Harrison, who is four.

Although Jessica completed the two big licensure assessments required for principal certification some time ago, this is the first principal job she has applied for. She says she thinks the timing was right.

Mullins has a bachelor's degree in K-5 teaching, with an emphasis in kindergarten and a minor in special education, and she earned a master's degree in instructional leadership at Eastern Kentucky University.

Mullins is the daughter of Phyllis and Rodney Dennis. Ravenna Mayor Estine Tipton and the late Clyde (Fatherbear) Tipton are her maternal grandparents and her paternal grandparents are Bill Dennis and Irene Dennis Lutes.

Many know Mullins outside of the school system for her hobby business, "Take it Personal." She sells hand-painted personalized ceramic plates, mugs, pitchers and other items.

"I have had to cut back on my painting," she said, "but I still intend to paint, because it is my personal hobby."

She recently lost a helper, when her sister, Laura Ashley Dennis, moved to Washington State to take a job.

Mullins is excited about her new role at ESE, which one of the teachers there called "Disney World," because it is such a happy place.

Mayor announces he will not seek re-election

By LISA BICKNELL
CV&T News Editor

When the Irvine City Council met on Monday night for their regularly scheduled meeting, Irvine Mayor Ernest Farmer announced he will not be running for office again in the upcoming election. He said problems with his hearing influenced his decision not to seek re-election. Jim Walters was present at the meeting to ask the council to re-address an issue he brought before the council over a year ago. He said a property near his home on High Street still has not been cleaned up. He said he was told last summer that more than 20 copperheads had been killed in the area, and they hide in the block, brick and debris on the lot. He said the property has become “very very dangerous” to his grandchildren who play on his property near the site. Irvine Police Chief Brad Smith said he would send the landowners another letter and attempt to make contact with them by phone. If action is still not taken, they can be cited for violating a nuisance ordinance. Louise Holbrook addressed the council about problems she’s had recently with water backing up in her basement, an issue she has never experienced before in the years she has lived at 294 Main Street. Mayor Farmer said he knows there is a problem with a 30-inch culvert nearby that goes down to a 20-inch culvert and can’t handle the run-off. In new business, Joe Crawford gave a report for the Estill Development Alliance. He said he had attended the SOAR summit, and he announced that Eastern Kentucky Locomotive would be having a banquet in Powell County soon. Crawford said he hopes to get some helpful feedback from that meeting. He also said a mobile app is in the works that will feature a full directory of businesses for those who are new in town. He said the River City

Players are planning their next production, and that they are getting closer to a plan to get the Mack Theater open again. Applications are out for a new session of Leadership LEAP, and the Chamber of Commerce has begun a new year with a new slate of officers. Crawford also has been meeting with Elaine Wilson with Kentucky Adventure Tourism. “She says we’ve got to move,” he said, because the city is perfect for a trail town. Crawford read a resolution of support to be included in the Trail Town application packet, which the council swiftly approved. Irvine Police Chief Brad

Smith asked the council to contact Kentucky legislators who are now in session in Frankfort and voice their opposition to the “Sundown” rule that would gradually lower the regulation fees for alcohol sales. Smith said it is important to enforcement that the city be able to keep those fees. City Attorney Rodney Davis said the council is currently accepting applications for non-quota alcohol sales in stores and restaurants. In reports around the table, Councilwoman Nelle Williams asked how the audits are progressing. Mayor Farmer said the audit for 2009-10 has been completed, and they are now waiting on the reports. Fire Chief Tony Murphy said the people from the ISO will be in town during the latter part of the week as they assess the fire departments of Ravenna, Irvine and the county. City Clerk Robin Sewell said Willis and Rebecca Estes requested a license to open an antique and vintage vendor mall inside the former location of Dr. Patterson’s office at 105 Main Street. She also said that the Mexican restaurant has new owners who have applied for a privilege license. The Mayor said they have ordered a new light pole to replace one that was broken on Main Street in December. The new pole will cost approximately $1700. Mayor Farmer also reminded that filing for the offices of city council and mayor ends on Jan. 28, at 4 p.m.

Financial debate kicks off year’s first council meeting

By LISA BICKNELL
CV&T News Editor

The Ravenna City Council’s financial report evoked much discussion Monday night at the first meeting of the year. Councilman William “Pig” Van Cleve questioned why the city has been paying an average of $198 extra dollars a month on gasoline for the past six months, and he wondered why insurance premiums had increased from $966 to around $1400 since last year. Mayor Estine Tipton said gas prices had gone up, and Van Cleve said they had also gone back down. After some deliberation, the council came to no definite conclusion for the overall rise in gasoline costs. City Clerk Susan Lay said the reason city insurance premiums have gone up is because the city is now providing her insurance, whereas the former city clerk didn’t require insurance from the city. Van Cleve also questioned why Fire Chief David Harvey received a $200 Christmas bonus when the council voted to give the bonus to only full-time employees. “We didn’t vote to do that,” said Van Cleve. Lay said she made a mistake, because she thought Harvey was a full time employee. Harvey said he has received a bonus every year for the “26 years I’ve been here.” The council ultimately voted to approve the bonus. “We’ve already done it anyway,” Tipton said. Ravenna City Police Officer Ken White reported that 404 children were served through the Toys for Tots drive, and he called the project “a success.” He said he wanted to thank everyone who contributed. Fire Chief David Harvey said there were no reported fires in the month of December. Kathy Collett, of 306 Elm Street, addressed the council and asked that something be done about the water that collects in her yard in the event of heavy rain. She said a small lake forms and that it had become “too much of a problem.” Councilmen Officer and Van Cleve, as well as Mayor Estine Tipton, had surveyed the problem and the cause was determined to be broken tiles. “We’ll fix it,” said Mayor Tipton. A drain issue in front of

Williams Memorial Baptist Church was addressed also. Councilman Officer had pictures of the run-off which froze during the recent cold spell. Councilman Van Cleve said the sewer drain line should be moved from the church to the storm sewer, and the council agreed. In the comments and questions section of the meeting, Councilman Van Cleve again brought up the insurance premium tax. He said that the city is taking in more at the 12.5 percent rate than they were at the 15 percent rate because the premiums are higher. He said since July the city has taken in a couple of thousand dollars more than it had in that time period the previous year. At that rate, he said, the city should come out about $3000 ahead of what they had with the 15 percent rate. “I still think it [the tax] should be lowered,” he said. He said the tax is not for the council but for the people of Ravenna. City Clerk Susan Lay said the city’s ability to stay afloat “is close now.” After much discussion, no action was taken concerning the insurance premium tax. Larry Henry announced that there will be a fish fry for the council members and their families at the next meeting on Feb. 10, 2014, starting at 5 p.m.

Driver upset about girlfriend’s arrest also taken into custody

By LISA BICKNELL
CV&T News Editor

An Irvine man was arrested for wanton endangerment, disorderly conduct and other charges after he yelled and cursed at Irvine Police Officer Jon Sturniolo. Gerald Johnson, 25, of 204 Scott Court, was served a warrant on Jan. 12, 2014 for offenses allegedly committed on Jan. 2, 2014. According to the warrant, Officer Sturniolo was yelled at and cursed by the defendant during a traffic stop when Sturniolo arrested Johnson’s girlfriend for an active warrant. Sturniolo stated that

Johnson followed him to the Estill County jail and said he was going to take his girlfriend home. When Sturniolo told Johnson that his girlfriend was going to jail and that he needed to go home, Johnson drove recklessly out of the parking lot, cutting off a pick-up truck and putting his girlfriend’s two minor children at risk of physical injury or death, along with the driver of the truck. Johnson drove east on River Drive at a high rate of speed. When Johnson was arrested on Sunday, he was charged on ten counts, including obstruction or interference with an officer, disorderly conduct, second degree; three counts of wanton endangerment, first degree; driving too fast for traffic conditions; failure to give or improper signal; reckless driving, improper start from a parked position and disregarding or failure to yield at a right of way. Johnson was lodged in the Estill County Jail, and his bond was set at $25,000 cash. Autumn F. Reed, 37, no address given, was arrested on a warrant issued by the Estill District Court for several charges he incurred after failure to stop when Constable Danny Conrad attempted to pull him over on suspicion of a DUI and for a broken tail lamp on Dec. 13, 2013. According to the warrant, Reed continued down River Drive to Court Street where he drove up on the sidewalk and proceeded to accelerate to a dangerous speed. He ran the stop sign at Court and Broadway, continued down

Court Street and ran the stop sign at Francis and Court Streets. He then proceeded down Laurel Street and ran the stop sign at Laurel and Rice Streets. When turning onto Rice Street, he slid into a residential yard, then nearly collided with oncoming traffic.

He continued driving erratically up Rice Street to Sweet Lick Road and up Chestnut Stand to the top, where he evaded Constable Conrad by creating a barricade and escaping into the wilderness. Conrad executed the arrest warrant on Jan. 8, 2014. Reed was charged with having no tail lamps, failure to use or improper signal, disregarding stop sign, fleeing or evading police, first degree; wanton endangerment, first degree, and reckless driving. In court, Judge William D. Leach set Reed’s bond at $10,000 cash, deeming Reed a flight risk.

Trust ... But Definitely Verify

By Lee H. Hamilton

Of all the numbers thrown at us over the course of last year, one stands out for me. I hope we can avoid repeating it this year.

That number is 12. It's the percentage of Americans in a December Quinnipiac poll who said they trust the government in Washington to do what is right most or all of the time. It's a depressingly small number — especially compared to the 41 percent who say they “hardly ever” trust the government. This meshes with recent polls that echo a bleak truth: trust in government is at historically low levels.

That's not all, though. Americans are feeling vulnerable and highly distrustful of both government and private-sector prying. More worrisome, a few months ago an AP poll found that fewer than a third of Americans trust one another. The poll's message is clear: our society is in the midst of a crisis in trust.

This might seem like a touchy-feely concern, but it's not. Trust is essential to our political system and our way of life. The belief that people and institutions will do what they say they will do is the coin of the realm in our society. It is what allows people to work together — in their daily interactions with others and in their communities, legislatures and Congress. Negotiation, compromise, collegiality, and the mechanisms our complex and diverse society depends on are impossible without trust. Trust is one of the medley of virtues that have allowed our institutions to develop and prosper, along with honesty, competence, responsibility, and civility.

A breakdown in trust between Congress and the executive branch invariably brings problems: the turmoil of the Vietnam War era, Watergate, Iran-Contra, our current budget travails. A society-wide lack of trust imposes real costs. It makes the drafting of laws and their implementation extremely difficult: government becomes more expensive because it requires more emphasis on regulations and enforcement.

In fact, you could argue that we see all around us the results of our trust deficit. Government dysfunction, an economy performing below its potential, public officials' scandals and misdeeds, trusted institutions' willingness to skirt the law and standards of good conduct, our social safety net under attack because people mistrust recipients — all of these speak to a society struggling as trust weakens.

Yet here's a question. Do the polls match your experience? In my case, they do not. Trust still figures in my dealings with institutions and individuals, most of whom are good people trying to live a decent life and to be helpful to others. They deal with one another honorably and with care. I'm convinced that this is because, no matter what the polls say at the moment, the habits instilled by parents, schools, and a vast number of public and private institutions do not just disappear.

These habits include the experience of grappling with the challenges that representative democracy throws at us — and they serve as a reminder that we need trust in one another to make our national experiment in representative government work.

As idealistic or even naive as this may sound, we need to work toward more trust among our people and between people and their government. Some new laws might help, but the challenge is more basic than law can address. Higher standards of conduct at all levels of American life must become the norm. Trust may have weakened, but most of us do not see or experience a corrupt America. Even as we have become a larger, more diverse nation, a sense of community remains crucially important to make this country safe and secure for ourselves and our children.

We cannot take for granted our success at self-government over the centuries: the only invisible hand guiding and preserving our institutions is our collective will.

Events in recent years have given us plenty of reason to be distrustful. Clearly, healthy skepticism is warranted in the wake of the NSA revelations, the problems with the roll-out of the Affordable Care Act, and other evidence of both government and corporate misbehavior. In the end, however, “trust but verify” is still the golden standard. Our ability to function and move forward as a society rests on trust. Think about it.

Session's first week: The good, the bad and the ugly

By Jim Waters

The classic main theme from Sergio Leone's spaghetti western “The Good, The Bad and The Ugly” serves as appropriate background music while perusing this column about the first week of the 2014 session of the Kentucky xGeneral Assembly.

The Good:

Pension reform is not dead.

After exaggerated claims about the feeble pension-reform bill passed during last year's legislative session, I was concerned that even lawmakers supportive of additional reforms might not be willing to touch the politically toxic issue — especially during an election year.

However, Sen. Damon Thayer, R-Georgetown, said during a Louisville talk-radio program on the eve of this year's session that he was going to join Sen. Chris McDaniel, R-Taylor Mill, in an effort to make the Kentucky Retirement System transparent.

“Right now, taxpayers have no idea what the pensions are for any state employee or legislator,” Thayer said.

Thayer also said shining the light on the system — thus revealing previously heretofore unknown shenanigans to taxpayers and voters — would make future significant reforms more possible.

It's hard to imagine what good reason House leaders have for dragging their feet on making the information regarding pensions available to the taxpayers who foot the bill.

The Bad:

House Speaker Greg Stumbo, D-Prestonsburg, has launched an all-out populist policy campaign by making a whopping minimum-wage hike from Kentucky's current $7.25 to $10.10 an hour his legislative priority.

House Minority Leader Jeff Hoover may have been more right than even he knew, labeling the proposal a “redistribution of wealth.”

A new National Bureau of Economic Research study cites research indicating that a majority of the redistribution that occurs with forced minimum-wage increases is not from the wealthy to lower-skilled workers, which is how supporters try to sell the idea. Rather, it's from families in — or nearly in — poverty to other workers in the same position.

In fact, forcing a minimum-wage hike on business owners causes some families to actually fall into poverty as family members lose jobs cut by employers forced to raise wages.

According to the Employment Policies Institute, 645,000 entry-level jobs were lost when Congress raised the national minimum wage by just 50 cents an hour in 1996 — and that was during a robust economy, something Kentucky certainly doesn't have right now.

Does the House Democratic leadership really consider policies like raising the minimum wage by nearly $3 an hour the great answer to the Bluegrass State's economic revival?

The Ugly:

Anybody who believes in the freedom of speech — one of our most precious rights — must be disappointed in the way Gov. Steve Beshear concluded his State of the Commonwealth speech.

“Fueled by social media and talk radio, we're losing the ability to listen,” Beshear said. “We're losing the ability to treat each other's opinions with respect and to overcome differences. My friends, we must resolve not to let that happen here in Kentucky. We must remember that we are Kentuckians first and Democrats and Republicans second.”

Are you kidding me?

This is how the governor leading a state with a tradition of vigorous political debate and the annual Fancy Farm spectacle — with its rank partisanship and where the ultimate goal is to literally shout down and find the most creative ways possible to demean your political opponents — ends his speech?

Perhaps the governor singled out talk radio and the social media because those are the entities most willing to staunchly and persistently oppose his big-spending agenda of expanding Medicaid and bringing Obamacare to Kentuckians' checkbooks while failing to lead a genuine economic revival.

That should tell you a lot about the state of this commonwealth's executive leadership.

Beverly Thompson's girlhood memories

By Beverly Thompson
CV&T Guest Columnist

On this magical night I witnessed a beautiful sight as I peered out of my window. I watched the snow began to accumulate and finally to drift into many exotic and strange shapes. The lights from the neighbor's houses turned my window into a mystical stage. When the whirl of the wind was mild, the flakes would dance in slow motion, but as it increased its volume to an eerie earth-shattering crescendo, they danced with such abandon that they finally threw themselves against the pane of glass like pagan dancers. The snow thunder brought all of this to an end, and the sacrificed snowflakes covered the window as completely as if someone had just closed a curtain. These were the imaginative thoughts of a lonely little girl who had no one to share her make-believe dreams with and this was her way to finally fall asleep into a fantasy dream world. When the first light of day appeared, all dreams vanished and cold reality took over. I got out of bed and put on the warmest clothes that I had. There were chores to be done, and, as always, Remzy had to be milked, and then the fire had to be built in the furnace before beginning the cold trip to school. There was no such thing as a snow day, so as soon as we finished our breakfast we all walked to school. Someone had given my mother a pair of snow pants that just fit me, and I was told to put them on. My shoes were beginning to wear out, but, luckily they fit into a pair of my brother's outgrown galoshes. When I got to school that morning I was still warm and dry. Today, "Ole Man Winter" had been outsmarted. In all my life I never heard my father raise his voice to my mother. I never heard him say a curse word. I am sure that he must have known them and probably said them, but never at home. We had a peaceful family life. Daddy made all the big decisions, and then mamma did what she wanted to, and Daddy was always agreeable. Mamma never wasted a minute. When she finally sat down in the evening she had croqueting or hand work close by. She did beautiful embroidery work and made scarves and dollies for all the furniture. She darned all of the socks and put patches on the clothing that could not be repaired any other way. She was always busy, busy, busy. She could not be happy, unless she was doing something productive. After much thought Daddy gave her a pet name which sure did fither. He called her his "Triggerheel." When he called her that to her face, she would get up from whatever she was doing and kiss him and run her fingers through his pretty snow-white hair. Daddy was mother's first and only love, and the fact that he was twenty-five years older than her never seemed to make any difference. He was hers, and she was his, and that is just the way it always was. No matter how bad the times got, we all knew that we were part of a loving family and sooner or later everything would work out. When spring came the hobos came. They must have marked our house, because almost every day one would come to our door for food. There were times when we barely had enough for ourselves, but Mother would always try to find a piece of cornbread and maybe put some honey on it. It wasn't fancy, but they always acted like they were glad to get it and never forgot to thank Momma. Having honey at our house was a new thing. One of Daddy's clients needed a lawyer, but he had no money, so one day he delivered a hive of honey bees to our house, complete with a smoker, a veiled hat and gloves for robbing the hive. Mamma was tickled to death with the bees, and she loved the honey, but all I had to do was get within sight of that hive, and they came after me. I excused myself from that little chore and made sure that I was nowhere to be found when the time came to rob that hive. Much to my disappointment the bees thrived, the hive produced another queen, who swarmed and landed in a tree. Daddy got another hive and coached the bees to go into it, and now there were two hives of bees to make my life a misery, but momma was overjoyed. No one ever knew what would turn up at our house next. One day a big farm truck backed up to our front steps, and two husky young men unloaded an old upright piano to our house. They even rolled it in and put it in the dining room. For lack of money, another client was paying his bill in kind. My mother's eyes lit up like a Christmas tree, and I feared for the worst. My mother could see me as the next church pianist, but I could see nothing but disappointment and disaster. After a year of agonizing music lessons with absolutely nothing to show for it, I was finally allowed to slide back into my own little world. My poor mother had to face the reality that her daughter had absolutely no talent for music. I realized that I had disappointed my mother, but I was as happy as any little girl could possibly be as I ran out of the house and into our front yard. I was free at last from that monstrosity that practically filled up the whole dining room and had made my life miserable for one whole year.

TIMES PAST

The following is continued from a piece which ran in the Jan. 9 issue of the Citizen Voice & Times. It is part of Chapter 4 of Hallie Johnstone's book History of Estill County.

Captain J.M. Thomas, owner of the Estill Springs Hotel, learning of the earnest desire of this small congregation to have a church of their own, made known his desire to have the church located on the vacant lot on the corner of Main and Richmond Streets, where it would be convenient for his guests to attend services. For this favor he would furnish the lumber. This liberal offer stimulated interest and soon sufficient funds were raised. The church was built by Mr. B.F. Jacobs and Mr. Albert Clowers. The church was dedicated May, 1989. The Rev. L.M. Reynolds was pastor; Rev. Jesse Walden assisted with the dedication. Mr. Ben F. Jacobs was the first Sunday School superintendent. He was followed by Mr. Estill Payne, station agent for the R.N.I & B. Railroad. Mr. O.W. Witt followed Payne, a position he faithfully discharged for fifty years. The author, then a small lass, in company with her parents attended the dedicatory services of this church, which were followed by a basket dinner spread at the Estill Springs. It was a lovely day for the occasion. Among those in charge of serving were Mrs. Rose Wagers, Mrs. J.B. White, Mrs. Park Hume, Mrs. Hallie Vaughn and Miss Judith Tudor. The congregation outgrew the little church, and with the same zeal used by their forefathers, the members raised funds for the building of the present large and beautiful edifice located diagonally across Main Street from the former church. The new church was dedicated August 28, 1927. The present minister is Rev. John Gardner; two missionaries have gone out from the church; they are Miss Heather Dimple and Mrs. Marjorie Davis Spice.

METHODIST CHURCH

Organized Methodism in Estill Co. runs parallel to the history of the county. Both were organized in 1808. Joseph Proctor has the honor of having brought the gospel to this area. He built his log cabin home here in 1805, and began the Kimbrell Methodist Chapel in the community of Spout Springs. It was dedicated in 1809. About the same time he organized a church on White Oak Cree which bore the name of Proctor's Chapel. Rev. Proctor had the strange combination of frontiersman, Indian fighter, and minister of the gospel. Having enlisted in the Virginia State Troops in 1778, he came to Kentucky wilderness to assist Col. Benjamin Logan, Capt. James Estill and others in protecting and defending the early settlers against the Indians. He was converted at a meeting held by the Rev. James Hawkes at a fort in Madison County and was ordained by Bishop Francis Asbury. It is said that he spread the gospel where he went. From the time the courthouse was built until his death December 2, 1844, he held prayer meeting services in the building each Thursday night.

IRVINE METHODIST

The Irvine Methodist Church has a history that dates back to the time the county was organized. The building was erected in 1830, but was not dedicated until January 1, 1850, when the last indebtedness was paid. The lot on which it was built was donated by Squire Finney (1799-1877) who owned this land and adjacent property. The trustees were Robert Clark, Steven Noland, M.M. Price, W.J. Clark, J. Wiseman, James Poynter, William Chiles, William McMahan, and W.P. Noland. The church sent out two ministers early in it history, Elisha Bowman and W.H. Riddell, who lost his life in the Civil War. James Tuttle and wife, of this church, served several years as missionaries in LaPaz, Bolivia. In 1903, the church was dismantled and the present building was erected. Family names which have been represented in the membership of this church for more than a hundred years include Smiths, Nolands, Bentons, Wilsons, Friends, Riddells, Snowdens, and Tiptons.

JACKSON CHAPEL METHODIST

Jackson Chapel Methodist Church has served the Spout Springs community for more than a century. The building is still in good preservation and the membership is strong and active. On September 12, 1844, the grant of two acres of land on which the church had already been built was made to the five trustees: John Kimbrell, John Spry, James Lilly, James Kimbrell, and Hickman Patrick. The grant was made by Samuel Jackson, Samuel Wheeler, Andrew Lowell, William G. Jackson, and Josiah Jackson, a company of landholders who had bought and surveyed a tract of land in that area for the purpose of building railroad. Their plans for the railroad failed to materialize, were abandoned and they disposed of their holdings. A little churchyard adjoins the church where many of the early settlers lie sleeping, including the McKinney family which operated the Cottage Furnace. One of the first circuit riders to serve the church was Van Buren Daughhette (Daugherty). His circuit included the Hazel Green, Campton, and Hardwicks Creek Methodist Churches. Rev. Daugherty was of Dutch descent, an ancestor of Luther Patrick. Churches old and churches new serve to make Estill County a good place in which to live and to rear a family. Lack of space prevents us from giving a history of other churches in the county. Speaking in terms of churches, we are reminded of what June Park, editor of The Mountain Sentinel, a weekly newspaper published here in 1898, stated in his column on Short Talks, "We will wager that Irvine has as much preaching to the square inch of religion as any other town in the state." At that time Irvine was only a small village. There were only four churches; Methodist, Christian, Presbyterian, and Colored Baptist. All were equipped with bells, and when their sweet chimes rang out on Sunday morning reminding the people of the community of the sacred obligation, their music was inspiring and pleasant to hear. There is nothing so lovely to see as we travel along the highway as a little white church steeple which appears to be pointing to our Heavenly Father. It makes one thankful for the privilege of living in this wonderful land where people of all faiths can worship God as they chose.

MASONIC BODIES

Four years before Kentucky became a state the Grand Lodge of Virginia granted a charter to Richard C. Anderson, John Fowler, Green Clay, and others to hold a regular lodge of the Free Masons at the "town of Lexington, in the District of Kentucke." The name and designation was "Lexington Lodge No. 25." After the establishment of the Grand Lodge of Kentucky on October 18, 1800, it became "Lexington Lodge No. 1, F&A.M." Some of the outstanding pioneer members of Lexington Lodge No. 1 were General Green Clay, Felix Grundy, Henry Clay, General James G. Trotter, Jesse Bledsoe, Levi Todd (one of the founders of the City of Lexington), John Jordon, John Bradford, founder of the Kentucky Gazette, Joseph Hamilton Davis, later Grand Master, killed at the battle of Wabash in the War of 1812, Edward West, steamboat inventor, and David McClelland. In 1820 Henry Clay was the Master of Lexington Lodge No. 1, and Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Kentucky at the same time, a situation which has never recurred. The Grand Lodge of Kentucky met in the same hall with Lexington Lodge No. 1 until 1859, when it was removed to Louisville, Kentucky. The Charter of Lexington Lodge No. 1 was issued November 17, 1788.

IRVINE LODGE NO. 137, F&AM

On August 26, 1844 the Grand Lodge of Kentucky granted a charter under the name of Irvine Lodge No. 137 and the following Masons were designated as the first officers: Robert Clark, Master; Ralph Harris, Senior Warden; and Albert A. Curtis, Junior Warden. The Master Masons were Andrew Lawell, George Bush, Edward D. Stodton, Robert B. Creed, Francis F. Jackson, Edward D. Payne, and Stephen Noland (Entered Apprentice). Irvine Lodge has the distinction of having maintained an unbroken career of Masonic activity for more than a century. It owns and occupies its building, which consists of the lodge hall and club room on the second floor, the kitchen and dining hall on the third story, and a large store room on the ground, which is leased to Western Auto Company. Other bodies which meet in the Masonic Temple are Irvine Chapter No. 42, Royal Arch Masons; Irvine Council No. 92, Royal & Select Masters; Irvine Chapter No. 357, Order of the Eastern Star; and Irvine Shrine No. 9, White Shrine of Jerusalem. Irvine Lodge from the time it was chartered has ranked well among the leading lodges of Eastern Kentucky. Its membership has, during its existence, represented the highest type of citizenship of the community, men of wide reputation in the affairs of fraternal and public life, and many of them have held positions of honor and trust. In July, 1901, all of the lodge property, charter, and records were destroyed by fire. The Grand Lodge granted a duplicate charter, but this disaster was a great setback to the organization. However, with that courage and faith which was so typical of Kentucky Masons, and after many sacrifices of its members, the lodge was reestablished and enjoying renewed activity within a few months. The writer, as a small child, witnessed the burning of the lodge. At that time my parents lived in the colonial home of Col. John H. Riddell, located on the corner of what is now Court and Broadway streets. My father awakened about eleven o'clock that night and discovered the fire. The Masonic Temple, a large three story frame building, stood on the corner of Main and Broadway streets. The first floor was occupied by the W.T.B. Williams Bank and Mrs. Lou Hume's millinery shop. The second floor was devoted to various offices. The lodge held its meetings on the third floor. It had met that night. The fire evidently originated on the third floor, and since the tippie was situated in the center of town, the whole community was threatened. As was customary in those days, a bucket brigade was organized by the men and boys of the town to fight the fire. The conflagration was so great that many of the cisterns and wells were pumped dry. Two other stores on Main Street were destroyed. However, two dwellings situated on each side of the fire were saved by the strenuous efforts of the fire fighters. The valuable records and money in the bank and many goods from the other buildings were also saved. The peaceful attitude which existed among the brothers of the lodge while our country was engaged in the Civil War is worth of mention. It was reported to the author by the late Judge Hugh Riddell. In December, 1864, Colonel Henry Clay Lilly, Colonel of the United States Army in the Civil War, also master of the lodge at that time, had come home for Christmas and so had Colonel Joseph L.N. Dickens, a Colonel in the Confederate Army.

Winter Weather Safety Tips

After the harsh start to last week, we have had some much needed relief over the weekend. However, lets remember we are still in the first part of January and winter is just starting for us. I think anyone who had pipes that would freeze did that last week, but still take the time and make sure you fix things properly and insulate well. Also, take the time and prepare a Disaster Supply Kit, you never know when you might need it. Everyone is potentially at risk during winter storms. Most fatalities are indirectly related to the storm. People die from traffic accidents on icy roads, heart attacks while shoveling snow, and hypothermia from prolonged exposure to cold. Be prepared for winter weather. Listen to NOAA weather radio or commercial radio/television to stay informed about winter storm watches, warnings and advisories. At home and work, plan ahead for winter storms by having these in hand:

- Flashlight and extra batteries
- Battery-

- powered NOAA weather radio
- Extra food and water - high energy food such as dried fruit, nuts and granola bars, and food requiring no cooking or refrigeration.
- Can opener
- Extra medicine and baby supplies
- First Aid Kit
- Heating fuel
- Emergency heat source
- Fire extinguisher
- Smoke alarm
- Make sure pets have plenty of food, water and shelter.
- If you are already indoors during hazardous winter weather:
- Stay inside
- When using alternate heat from a fireplace, wood stove, space heater, etc., use fire safeguards and properly ventilate.
- Close off unneeded rooms
- Stuff towels or rags in cracks under doors.
- Cover windows at night.
- Eat and drink - food provides the body with energy for producing its own heat.
- Wear layers of loose-fitting, lightweight, warm clothing.
- The best advice for traveling during forecasted winter conditions is; "simply stay at home." Only travel if necessary. However, if you must:
- Before starting out in a vehicle:
- Plan your

- travel.
- Check the weather.
- Have road condition phone numbers handy,
- Carry a Winter Storm Survival Kit.
- Keep the gas tank near full to avoid ice in the tank and fuel lines.
- Avoid traveling alone.
- Let someone know your timetable and route.
- If you are stranded in your vehicle during hazardous winter weather:
- Stay with your vehicle.
- Take turns sleeping.
- Run the motor every hour for 10 minutes to keep warm
- Keep windows open a little to prevent carbon monoxide buildup.
- Make sure the exhaust pipe is not blocked.
- Tie a bright cloth to the antenna.
- Exercise periodically by vigorously moving your arms, legs, toes and fingers.
- Turn on the dome light while the engine is running to aid rescuers at night. After the snow stops falling, raise the car hood to indicate you need help.
- A good automobile Winter Safety Kit includes: cell phone and charger, blankets, flashlight and extra batteries, first-aid kit, knife, high-calorie non-perishable food, bottled water, extra clothing to keep dry, large empty can to use as emergency toilet, tissues and paper towels, small can and waterproof matches to melt snow for drinking water, sack of sand or cat litter for traction, shovel,

- windshield scraper and brush, tool kit, tow rope, battery booster cables, water container, compass and road maps.
- Dress for the storm if you must be outdoors during severe winter weather.
- Wear loose, lightweight, warm clothes in layers.
- Remove layers to avoid perspiration and subsequent chill
- Outer garments should be tightly woven, water repellent and hooded.
- Wear a hat - half your body heat loss can be from the head.
- Cover your mouth to protect your lungs from extreme cold.
- Mittens, snug at the wrist, are better than gloves.
- Try to stay dry.
- Cover all exposes body parts.
- Build shelter: a lean-to, windbreak or snow cave for protection from the wind.
- Build a fire for heat and to attract attention.
- Place rocks around fire to absorb and reflect heat.
- Melt snow for drinking water - eating snow will lower you body temperature.
- Avoid overexertion - especially when shoveling or freeing stuck vehicles.
- Being prepared for winter weather (just like all weather) starts at home. Be Aware, Learn How to Prepare. Visit us on the web at www.estillcountymem.com, find us on FB and follow us on Twitter.

Finally, a progress report

By LISA BICKNELL
CV&T Staff Writer

I'm thinking it's about time for a Clay column. Many of our readers still tell me they love reading about my grandson. However, because it's been a few months since I've written any sort of update, I'll take that as a hint. I'm happy to say Clay has made lots of progress since the last surgery. You might recall that back in September the doctors thought Clay had reherniated, but when he was in surgery they discovered he hadn't. So, instead of a hernia repair, the doctors did a Nissen fundaplication to try to resolve the problem he was having with frequent throw-ups. That surgery basically takes part of the stomach and wraps it around the lower esophagus, anchoring it in place. Well, the procedure helped tremendously. Every now and then something will trigger a retching episode, but because of the procedure, Clay can't throw up. Therefore, his liquid diet is staying down, and he's getting some meat back on his bones. Since August, Clay has been breathing on his own, without the ventilator or extra oxygen, except for the short time he needed them right after the surgery. He doesn't have the lung capacity most people do, so he tires easier. However, his lungs work pretty efficiently, and they're still growing. Last week, the ventilator and the oxygen concentrator were shipped back to the medical supply company after more than a year of use at home.

I'm thankful he had that equipment when he needed it, but thank goodness it's gone! Clay has become so much more mobile since he's been free of the ventilator. He's now on the verge of walking on his own, but he still holds on to things just a bit for balance. He stands and sits freely now, and he loves to play with any kind of ball. He's fascinated by everything on wheels. He loves to go outside and look at all the farm critters. Not only is he making huge gains physically, but he's very smart. He knows some of his colors, and his vocabulary is growing by leaps and bounds. He loves books and his favorite show is the Bubble Guppies. Clay has learned to communicate in a variety of ways. Sometimes, he wears a cap over the trach hole, which enables us to hear him talk, laugh or cry. When he isn't wearing the trach cap, he'll cover the trach hole with his finger to speak. Clay even mixes in some sign language with whatever other means of communication he's using. He can name just about everyone in the extended family, and that's saying a lot. We sure enjoyed having him home and well for Christmas. Clay was not overly concerned with presents, but he did seem to enjoy all the extra company and attention. Next month, the doctors have him scheduled for a sleep study, and, if all goes well, they will be completely removing the trach and stitching the hole in his throat closed. The feeding issue remains the most frustrating one. Clay is still completely tube-fed, although he has responded favorably to sips of broth or other tiny tastes on occasion. Most of the time, he's not very interested in eating though. Until he is, the calories will be piped in through a tube in his tummy.

Our big boy is learning to use the potty too! I know many of these are standard milestones for typical toddlers, but everything he does amazes Nan because he's far from typical. So there you have it, the latest news about our happy, delightful and growing little guy. Not bad considering all he's been through, is it? Clay had his first big-boy haircut back in the fall, which transformed his appearance into that of a little man. I'll include a picture, so you can see for yourself just how good he looks.

What You Should Know About Glaucoma: The Sneak Thief of Sight

Glaucoma is one of the leading causes of blindness, and an additional one million Americans will be diagnosed with glaucoma over the next 10 years. Early detection and treatment is critical to protect the eyes from this disease, but more than half of Americans who have glaucoma remain undiagnosed. As a result, they re not receiving the critical treatment they need. The exact cause is not known, but glaucoma results in damage to the retinal cells, irreversible damage to the optic nerve and loss of vision.

Glaucoma is often referred to as "the sneak thief of sight" because it can strike without pain or other symptoms. Vision lost to glaucoma cannot be restored, so early detection and treatment are critical. Although the disease is not preventable, it is treatable, and regular, comprehensive eye exams play a critical role in successful results for patients.

Who is at risk?

People at the greatest risk for the disease include those who:

- Have a family history of glaucoma
- Are over age 60
- Have a history of increased eye pressure (see below for information on ocular hypertension)
- Have had severe eye trauma
- Are African-Americans and Hispanics

Some studies also suggest high amounts of near-sightedness, cardiovascular disease and diabetes also may be risk factors for the development of glaucoma. Ocular hypertension Ocular hypertension is the elevation of pressure in the eye. This condition must be carefully monitored because it could develop into glaucoma. A doctor of optometry will recommend how frequently eye exams should occur. It is more common in people who are very near-sighted and those with diabetes or high blood pressure. Certain medications also alter eye pressure.

Detection and treatment

A comprehensive, dilated eye exam includes a glaucoma test, which is a simple and painless procedure. Ifdiagnosedearly,glaucoma often can be controlled, and further vision loss may be minimized. Lack of treatment will cause loss of peripheral vision first, then central vision will be affected, eventually leading to blindness. Glaucoma is treated with prescription eye drops that must be taken regularly. Eventually, laser therapy or surgery may be needed to prevent further vision loss. Whether you are at a greater risk for development of glaucoma or not, remember early detection is the key to prevention of blindness with this disease. Be sure to schedule an annual comprehensive eye exam with a doctor of Optometry to decrease your risk of blindness from glaucoma and prolong the life of your vision.

Delicious Gluten-Free Desserts: Bakery Owner Tosses the Flour but Keeps the Flavor

More than ever, people understand that our bodies just weren't designed to handle the amount of processed flour found in many of today's food. Some people with vague, undiagnosed illnesses feel better after cutting out gluten, a protein in flour-based foods. Many Americans, including professional athletes and celebrities such as Zooey Deschanel and men's tennis leader Djovak Nokovic, say they look and perform better since dropping gluten from their diets. "Unfortunately, a lot of people who commit to a gluten-free lifestyle believe they have to sacrifice their favorite desserts, because gluten-free treats are often loaded with sugar but low on flavor," says Kyra Bussanich, (www.kyrasbakeshop.com), author of a new, full-color recipe book, "Sweet Cravings: 50 Seductive Desserts for a Gluten-Free Lifestyle" (Ten Speed Press; Random House, Inc.) Bussanich's gluten-free cupcakes twice bested their floury competition on "Cupcake Wars" (2011 and 2012) and were a runner-up for the show's Cupcake Champion. She shares her secrets in recipes such as Mexican Chocolate Baked Alaska, Persian Love Cakes with Cardamom Buttercream and Vanilla Chiffon Cake with Blackberry Coulis. After suffering a life-threatening illness at 20, Bussanich recovered with the help of a new diet without gluten. She began testing gluten-free recipes while attending the prestigious Le Cordon Bleu patisserie program and later opened her popular business, Kyra's Bake

Shop. "My recipes are not good 'for being gluten-free;' they're just good, and that's why people who eat gluten visit my bakery and order gluten-free desserts," she says. "For me, being diagnosed with an autoimmune disease allowed me to turn lemons into gluten-free lemon meringue pie!" She invites anyone who doubts that gluten-free can be delicious to try the following recipe:

Apple Crisp

6 large tart apples (Pippin or Granny Smith)
1/3 cup sugar, or 1/4 cup maple syrup
2 tablespoons tapioca starch
1 tablespoon ground cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon Chinese five-spice powder
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
Generous pinch salt
3 tablespoons cold butter
Topping
1/2 cup sweet white rice flour
1/2 cup millet flour
1/2 cup tapioca starch

1 cup packed golden brown sugar
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon Chinese five-spice powder
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
3/4 cup butter, room temperature
3/4 cup gluten-free oats
1/2 cup chopped pecans or walnuts (optional)
Preheat the oven to 350°F. Peel, core and slice the apples into 1/4-inch slices. Put the apple slices into a large bowl and sprinkle the sugar over the top. Add the tapioca starch, cinnamon, five-spice, ginger and salt and toss together to evenly coat the apple slices. Pour into a 9 by 13-inch baking pan, dot the top with pieces of the butter and set aside. To make the topping, combine the flours, tapioca starch, brown sugar, cinnamon, salt, five-spice and ginger in a mixing bowl. In a stand mixer with a paddle attachment, mix in the butter until it is uniformly incorporated into the flour mixture. Stir in the oats and pecans.

Crumble the oat topping evenly over the apples. Bake until the topping is golden brown and set and the apples are warm and bubbly, 55 to 60 minutes. You can prepare everything ahead of time. Refrigerate the apple filling and keep the topping frozen until ready to assemble and bake. Don't refrigerate the unbaked topping overnight since the millet flour will interact with the butter and taste and smell cheesy when it's baked.

About Kyra Bussanich

Kyra Bussanich is a two-time winner of The Food Network's hit show, "Cupcake Wars." She graduated with honors from Le Cordon Bleu and opened her award-winning bakery, Kyra's Bake Shop, which features gourmet, gluten-free sweets. She has branched beyond desserts to other gluten-free goods in order to help those with celiac and other autoimmune diseases enjoy quality treats.

Guest Columnist

The remote area in southern Kentucky where I spent my childhood was an isolated region. There were no telephones that connected it to the outside world; there was a party line that connected a few neighbors with each other. Few families in that region had radios, and daily newspapers were unknown to most folk. There were no improved roads; they came a few years later.

In all kinds of weather, I walked a little more than a mile over what was called a “dirt road” that was sometimes dusty and sometimes muddy to an old two-roomed country school that had served the neighborhood for many years. In that little school, there were good teachers who were also excellent role models for their students. Going beyond the material in textbooks, they taught me and other students some basic principles about life that were good for us.

Those who lived on that ridge formed a rather close-knit community. They belonged to churches of different denominations and different political parties, and at some points, there were differences of opinion among them. But they were good neighbors and good friends, and they had many things in common. Few, if any, had much of what is known as “this world’s goods,” they were poor country folk. Times were hard, and day by day all of them struggled to get by, and they did. Life was difficult, but it was good.

Neighbors on that ridge were bound together by the golden chain of generosity. When a neighbor had a need, large or small, and it often happened, neighbors forgot self and helped that neighbor. No one had an abundance of wealth, but neighbors shared out of the meagerness of their possessions, and a neighbor in need was helped.

Although those neighbors of my childhood lived in a remote community that was somewhat isolated, they were guided by a principle that has been at the heart of western civilization for centuries: Share with those who are in need and practice hospitality.

The above described property shall be sold upon the following terms and conditions:
1. The purchaser shall take the sale real estate free and clear of the claims of the parties to this action, but it shall be sold subject to the following:
a. current year (2013) ad valorem real estate taxes affecting the real estate for which the purchaser shall take no credit on the purchase price;

2. The sale shall be made to the highest and best bidder or bidders. The successful bidder shall pay cash or make a deposit of ten percent (10%) of the purchase price, with the balance on credit for sixty (60) days. Any purchaser, other than the Plaintiff, who does not pay cash in full, shall be required to execute a bond, with surety thereon acceptable to the Master Commissioner to secure the unpaid balance of the purchase price and sale bond shall bear interest at the rate of 12% per annum from the date of sale until paid, and shall have the same force and effect as a judgment and shall remain and be a lien on the property until paid. The purchasers shall have the privilege of paying all of the balance of the purchase price prior to the expiration of the sixty (60) day period.
3.The successful bidder at sale, at bidder's own expense, may carry fire and extended insurance coverage on the improvements from the date of sale until the purchase price is fully paid, in an amount at least sufficient to cover a loss to the extent of the court appraised value of the improvements on the real estate or the unpaid balance of the purchase price is fully paid, in the amount whichever is less, with the loss payable clause to the Master Commissioner. Failure of the purchaser to effect such insurance coverage shall not affect the validity of the sale or the purchaser's liability there under, but shall entitle, but not require, any party adjudicated an interest in the real estate, after giving notice to the Master Commissioner, to effect said insurance and furnish evidence of the policy to the Master Commissioner. The premium of the insurance policy shall then be charged to the purchaser as purchaser's cost.
4.In the event the Plaintiff becomes the purchaser of the real estate at the Master Commissioner's sale, and it the Plaintiff's bid if less that its lien adjudged herein, Plaintiff may comply with the terms of sale by taking credit upon this Judgment without making the cash deposit or execution the sale bond as provided for in this Judgment.

NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that on January 17, 2014 Kentucky Utilities Company ("KU") will file an application with the Public Service Commission, Frankfort, Kentucky for approval of revisions in its Demand-Side-Management and Energy-Efficiency ("DSM/EE") program portfolio, as shown in KU's Adjustment Clause Demand-Side Management Cost Recovery Mechanism ("DSMCRM") tariff and the resulting changes in its DSMCRM charges. In its application, KU notified the KPSC that the revised DSMCRM tariff sheets are proposed to become effective on and after February 16, 2014; however, because KU anticipates the Commission will suspend the proposed changes in the DSMCRM tariff to conduct an investigation of the proposed changes, KU has asked the Commission to approve the proposed changes in its DSM/EE program portfolio and resulting increases in the charges under the DSMCRM mechanism in its DSMCRM tariff to be effective on January 1, 2015.

The proposed changes to the DSM/EE program portfolio, if approved, will result in an increase in the charges calculated under the DSMCRM mechanism. The increase charges for all affected electric rate classes are as follows:

Residential Service Rate RS, Volunteer Fire Department Service Rate VFD, and Low Emission Vehicle Service Rate LEV
Current Charge per kWh	Proposed Charge per kWh	Difference per kWh	% Change
$ 0.00349	$ 0.00378	+ $ 0.00029	+ 8.3%

General Service Rate GS
Current Charge per kWh	Proposed Charge per kWh	Difference per kWh	% Change
$ 0.00238	$ 0.00222	- $ 0.00016	- 6.7%

All Electric School Rate AES
Current Charge per kWh	Proposed Charge per kWh	Difference per kWh	% Change
$ 0.00088	$ 0.00101	+ $ 0.00013	+ 14.7%

Power Service Rate PS, Time-of-Day Secondary Service Rate TODS, and Time-of-Day Primary Service Rate TODP
Current Charge per kWh	Proposed Charge per kWh	Difference per kWh	% Change
$ 0.00067	$ 0.00069	+ $ 0.00002	+ 3.0%

KU projects that the monthly bill impact of the new DSM/EE programs and program enhancements will be an increase of $0.29 per month for a KU residential electric customer using 1,000 kWh per month.

This tariff filing may be examined at the office of Kentucky Utilities Company, One Quality Street, Lexington, Kentucky, or on Kentucky Utilities Company's website at www.lge-ku.com.

This tariff filing may also be examined at the Commission's offices located at 211 Sower Boulevard, Frankfort, Kentucky, Monday through Friday, 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., or through the Commission's website at <http://psc.ky.gov>.

Comments regarding this tariff filing may be submitted to the Public Service Commission through its website or by mail to Public Service Commission, Post Office Box 615, Frankfort, Kentucky 40602.

The proposed changes to the DSM/EE program portfolio and associated increase in the charges calculated under the DSMCRM mechanism contained in this notice are proposed by Kentucky Utilities Company. The Public Service Commission may order changes to KU's proposed DSM/EE program portfolio that may result in charges under the DSMCRM mechanism that differ from the proposed charges contained in this notice.

A person may submit a timely written request for intervention to the Public Service Commission, Post Office Box 615, Frankfort, Kentucky 40602, establishing the grounds for the request including the status and interest of the party. If the Commission does not receive a written request for intervention within thirty (30) days of the initial publication or mailing of the notice, the Commission may take final action on the tariff filing.
